Source of the idea

But a village is different. The locals know almost everyone and hang out or gather at same usual places.

In the city, we live in small groups. We know a small number of people and we hang out with some of them.

Wether that is children gathering in an huge field to play soccer

The adults picking frutes and vegetables from the fields.

Or the elderly gathering at an old wooden seat under the shade.

But at the end of the day they all come together. The children continue their games, the adults come together for a cold beer, and the elderly enjoying the fresh air .

So why not gather all of the people in one place, no matter the age. What if there is a village gazebo they can all gather at?

Some people have a gazebo in their yard which they use to spend time with their family and friends. So the idea was, why not have a similar concept here, but one gazebo wouldn't have been enough for one village and it wouldn't define togetherness in a sence. Why not connect four of them like a molecule in which many people may sit and enjoy some time with the locals, also the area provides enough green space, so even the young can play around it. People can arrange meetings, barbeque, birthday partys and so on, giving the area and the object a special sentimental value. Giving people a unique and pleasant feeling of togetherness.
